BEST OF THE YEAR

We're ending '10 with the ultimate Video Friday

 Share List: Best of the Year

Drizzy D.R.O.

A Birmingham resident who frequently collaborates with ATL mixtape DJs, Drizzy's an enterprising hip-hop artist who promotes his career via his Press Play Hotline: an anytime service in which you call and give him a word or phrase, and he instantly/enthusiastically spits a gritty full-freestyle verse, or "16 bars", although how he raps while eating that many Zagnuts is anyone's guess.

The Big Ketch

Ketch is a half-brick-/half-wood-walled, seafood-serving cabin adorned with buoys and shoreline paintings, and boasting an 84-seat patio. Start with East Coast oysters w/ Ceviche mignonette from the shell bar, then get sammies like blackened/grilled/fried grouper, or entrees including wild GA shrimp, and sweet-chili-sauced Norwegian salmon, all while downing 20+ beers or signature cocktails like lemon/Chambord/blueberry vodka "You're My Boy Blue", which is weird, cause that's also what Will Ferrell says in that movie Old School.

North Georgia Canopy Tours

Tours is a zip line journey through the treetops of God's Country (aka, Lula, GA), with up to three hours of aerial and land exploration covering 100 acres of trees 'n' trails, run by an environmentally astute couple who learned the business in Costa Rica, and've since nicknamed themselves "Captain" Kirk, and "Princess" Leah -- so yeah, they know how to party.

Quickshot Shooting Range

Set up in an former body shop warehouse, Quickshot's a state-of-the-art shooting range (and the only one inside 285) with seven lanes, HEPA filter technology that removes 99.97% of lead from the air, and free (legitimately delicious) home-baked cookies, started by a Duluth-raised demolition biz owner who says he's targeting "the in-town crowd more than the die hard enthusiast", though he still promises a Hans-on experience.
